

Stephan Lucks

Stephan is a business psychologist at Pearn Kandola. He specialises in senior management development as well as assessment and selection work.

He has extensive experience of senior and executive development using both coaching and development centre approaches, as well as the delivery of coaching skills training for managers to support their development.

As a Chartered Psychologist, Stephan draws from a wide variety of psychological knowledge to support the development of other people, using approaches which include 360° feedback, personality questionnaires and bespoke designed diagnostic instruments. His approach to coaching is underpinned by the belief that individuals need to take responsibility for their own development, and is thus geared towards self-regulated learning.

He works towards building the environment and relationship necessary to support this, whilst at the same time not shying away from giving the feedback that is necessary to enable people to confront the barriers to their development through, for example, the use of cognitive behavioural approaches.

Stephan's coaching experience has involved working with senior managers and directors in developing their potential to progress in the organisation, and this has focused on specific skills development as well as broader, softer skills development. He is also experienced in the delivery of coaching skills programmes to aspiring coaches.
